Mr. Carl Ehlermann gave a breakfast at the St. Louis Club Saturday morning to the class of 1990, Smith Academy. Covers were laid for ten, and the class colors, red and white, were used in the table decora-tions.

report a single blossom on the coat lapel, especially if it be a newmarket or loose-fitting long raincoat. Individuality is allowed full sway; and the girl who affects one especial flower is considered to be rather more correct than she who appears one morning with a rose and the next with a carnation. Corsage bunches at the theater are already in high favor. During the recent opera season I saw Katherine Cunningham several times with large clusters of American Beauties pinned on; Mrs. Alex. Douglas's guest, Miss Knight, of Philadelphia, repeatedly wore President Carnot roses, even carrying them on some occasions, their faint pink apparently havthe severity which fashion has demanded for the last few years, and which prevails all over the country, and it follows as a very natural desire to deck themselves in rich robes now that velvets and furs are at the height of popularity. There is a fascination about the luxurious looking, and always expensive velvet that no mortal woman can withstand. I saw Mrs. Deane Cooper passing through the foyer at the Odeon at the Choral-Sym-phony concert on Thursday night, wearing a black velvet newmarket that became her well. It was plain, with some trifle of heavy black applique about the hem.

Mrs. A. C. Cassidy is wearing a handsome carriage cloak of dull red broadcloth, reaching quite to the edge of her skirts, and cut with kimona sleeves. Its ornamentation is of fox, in the natural shade of brown and gravish this: the soft fur forming a high grayish tints; the soft fur forming a high collar, deep revers and deep cuffs. The clonk is richly lined with white satin. Mrs. Charles McLure wears a sable newmarket over her evening gown that is, of course, the acme of style and elegance.

A rather novel black velvet and broadcloth A rather novel black veivet and broadcloth carriage garment is that which Mrs. O. H. Peckham has lately been wearing. This is cut with odd, loose sleeves almost like those which used to form a vital part of the old-fashloned maniels. The back has a short yoke, arranged with applique and veivet, and the sleeves take their start from this yoke. It is not exactly a la region but any yoke. It is not exactly a la ragian, but approaches that style. Lined throughout with white satin, and with a high ruff of velvet and applique about the neck, it is luxurious Best Watches—Mermod & Jaccardys.

Miss Margaret White Downey of the se-nior class of St. Vincent's Seminary will en-tertain her classmates and a small party of friends at her home, No. 5722 Bartmer ave-nue, on New Year's Eve. Dancing will be among the evening's diversions.

Mrs. George D. Barnett, who is a sister-in-law of Gwilym Miles, gave a musical at the Cabanne Club on Friday morning, inviting the Morning Choral, the Morning Etude and several other music clubs of women to hear her barytone brother-in-law. He gave a thoroughly accembale programme of ballads thoroughly acceptable programme of ballads and songs, among them, "Danny Dever," of pleasant Bispham memory. Mrs. William C. Little, Mrs. Halsey Ives, Mrs. Hardaway and several others who heard the Miles ver-sion declare unhesitatingly in its favor, as compared with the Bispham rendition. Mr. Miles, so say the ladies, made infinitely more of the pathos in the song than did Bispham, who always inclines toward the robusto and

Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hays and their daughters. Miss Marjory Hays and Miss Orian Hays, are visiting Mrs. Hays's parents. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gregg. They have just gotten back from a two months' stay in Paris, though their home for the last year has been California, Mr. Hays's offices being transferred from Montreal, where they spent four years, to the Pacific Coast.

Mrs. Hays, who was Flora Gregg, is a sister-in-law of Mrs. Norris B. Gregg, and is bring heartily welcomed by all the married set who knew her well as a girl. The two Hays daughters of 17 and 19 are out this season, and have entered into the gayety of the s week with much enthusiasm.

Two households where there are young girls will inaugurate, or, perhaps, I should more fittingly say, revive the custom of a morning reception on New Year's. Mrs. John Wilkinson and the Misses Wilkinson of Woodlawn have issued cards announcing their hours from 11 to 2 o'clock; and Mrs. James Aull has done the same thing. Miss Daisy Aull and Miss May Aull will assist their mother, the latter young lady making her first formal appearance. She is just back from an Eastern school.

The Thursday Dancing Club gave its sec-ond dance on Friday night, the regular night. Thursday, being taken by Mrs. Davis for her dance to the Misses Catlin and Wickham. This club expects to give a

"Florodora" audiences every night last week were composed for the main part of the college set. They fairly swarmed into the Century at each performance; sat in boxes; dashed out in the foyer between acts, and generally took possession of things. There was positively no room for anybody else, as all the collegians, male and female, secured their seats the first dash out of the box, and the house was sold out very early in the week. Consequently I beheld the most unusual spectacle of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Thompson, who either occupy a box or else choice from parquetchairs, seated on the backmost row, and almost out of sight. Mr. and Mrs. Marion Lambert, who invariably take front-row positions, were in a similar predicament; while; Harry Turner and a party of men found nothing left on Monday night but balcomy seats way round to one side near the boxes.

The modest bunch of violets tucked away almost out of sight, which has so long been considered as pre-eminently and alone the proper thing, must now give way and hide its head. Violets will do, but they are superseded by the more ornate blossoms. Gardenias, which have found favor in the Bast for many seasons, as a suitable boutouniere for men, have some way or other never bloomed in St. Louis, One florist who imported seasons plants declares that they imported several plants declares that they didn't sell, and that even those young men whose social aspirations lead them to adopt the newest and the prettiest ignored the dainty flower completely. So we have no gardenias with us at present; and proba-bly shall not in the near future, as they are both expensive and hard to cultivate.
